Where do I enter my practice hours?

You must have earned 1,000 practice hours of medical-surgical nursing during your five year certification period. Practice hours are different from contact hours. Do not enter your practice hours into your Tracker. Instead, you will attest to meeting the practice hour requirement when you complete the recertification application. You only need to show documentation for practice hours if you are selected for audit.

Do contact hours expire?

Yes! Contact hours do expire. During your first certification period, you can claim contact hours going back to the first day of the year in which you passed the CMSRN exam. For every subsequent certification period, you can claim any contact hours earned during your 5-year certification period.

If you recertify early, any contact hours earned between your application being approved and your next certification start date will not count towards your next recertification.

If you are in your grace period, your contact hours will expire on a rolling 5-year basis. You can only claim contact hours going back 5 years from the date you submit your recertification application.

What is a grace period?

You can still recertify by contact hours up to one year after the expiration of your CMSRN certification. This one-year period is referred to as your grace period. If your recertification application during your grace period is approved, your certification will be backdated to your last CMSRN expiration date. However, your certification is still expired in your grace period and you cannot use your CMSRN. Late fees will apply to recertify during your grace period.

This guide is current as of October 2021. Please see Renew Your Certification under amsn.org/certification for the most up-to-date information about CMSRN recertification.

Audit

10% of all recertification applications are selected for audit. You will be required to supply certificates and other contact hour documentation if you are selected.

Failure to or declining to complete the audit will result in a revocation of your CMSRN and your fees will be forfeit. See the CMSRN Guide to find out what an audit requires.
